

Philadelphia where now

The savvy traveler's guide to finding fun in Philadelphia

Heat Wave

Summertime in Philadelphia is all about enjoying the outdoors. Do so with a cold drink in hand and some great food to match, and you've got the right idea. Plus, with tons of outdoor dining options and beer gardens, it's easy to find a place to do just that.

Repurposed Splendor

Every summer, the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society transforms vacant areas of the city and turns them into outdoor retreats, complete with beer gardens, lawn and table games and events—all using repurposed materials and sustainable practices. These areas, pegged PHS Pop-Up Gardens, quickly become a local favorite. This year, the pop-ups can be found at 15th and South streets, the same spot as last year, and a brand new site: Viaduct Rail Park at the corner of 10th and Hamilton streets. Stop by for dreamy décor, entertainment and programming planned throughout the season, craft beer and more. Open seven days a week through early fall. 215.988.8800; phsonline.org/programs/phs-pop-up-gardens.
